The voice of retired Police officers

Smartphones. The Internet. Self-driving cars. The world has changed at an amazing rate in the last 50 years. Even more significantly for NARPO members, medical and social advancements have meant that, since the 1960s, life expectancy in the UK has increased by over 10 years. And, not only are we generally living longer, but there's also a good chance we'll enjoy good health during those later years.

At NARPO, it's our aim to help every one of the UK's many retired police officers, and those close to them, to make the most of this 'extra time' — with our chief concerns around pensions, welfare, wellbeing and a fulfilled life. So, in response to the rapid changes happening to the world we live in, we've adapted the way we're doing things to keep pace.

With this in mind, if you have any questions or need more information about the content in this brochure or on our website, please get in touch by email us at: hq@narpo.org

DISCOVER NARPO

We've widened our network and are now offering more services than ever before.

We've also made the decision to divide our services into three distinct areas – Life, Work and Leisure – to make it easier for our members to find the information that's relevant to them. It's an approach you'll encounter in everything we do, and particularly on our website, www.narpo.org — the place where all of our services and information come together.

We believe that life doesn't stop after the Police, it flourishes. It's our ambition to help yours do just that.

LIFE AFTER THE POLICE

Whether you're a former officer or you're related to one, life after the Police can throw up many new challenges, from looking after your finances to looking after yourself.

We're here to help our members and their dependants with useful advice on life and Wellbeing.

We also have a wealth of guides about, and regulatory advice on, pensions and the state benefits that you could be entitled to.

WORK AFTER THE POLICE

Just because you've stopped working for the Police, it doesn't mean you have to stop working.

Not only is working later in life great for your health, but it can also be great for your social life and your finances too!

So if you do decide to look for a new job, NARPO is a great place to start your thinking. We have the inside track on dozens of jobs that are perfectly suited to ex-officers — with everything from contracts that rely on your specialist skills to voluntary positions.
